Common Myths About Second Hand Mobiles – Busted!

In the modern fast-paced digital society, smartphones are no longer a luxury. Second hand mobile phones are another viable option as the cost of brand new flagship devices is hiking up each year. Even though this has become a trend, a number of myths and fallacies continue to exist about acquisition of a pre-owned phone.

Our focus at Refit Global is on certified refurbished and second hand mobile cellphones and we have over the years seen how misinformation causes many customers to pass on making good cost effective choices. In this paper, we are going to deconstruct some of the most popular misconceptions about purchasing second hand mobile phone and enlighten the reader with the truth that has to be known by the people who purchase these mobile devices.

Myth 1: Used Cell Phones Do Not Have A Long Life

The most common are that a used mobile phone will be faulty after a few months. The reality is that in most modern smartphones, several years of use can be maintained. By purchasing a phone off a reliable dealer like Refit Global, the phones undergo vigorous tests, are reconditioned and tested on their durability. As a matter of fact, most second hand mobile phones arrive with a warranty so you can have the same protection as you would upon buying new.

Reality:

It is nobody to argue that a well maintained second-hand mobile will last just like bought new through good inspection and maintenance.

Myth 2: All 2nd hand Mobiles are Old and Dated

There is the feeling that purchasing a second hand mobile phone implies using obsolete technology. However, the thing is that the devices are replaced by the user every 12 months and many of them are sold, though they are fairly new and still may be used. It is so that you can access relatively new second hand mobile phones of whose brand names are the most recent, such as Apple, Samsung, Vivo, and OnePlus, with a host of advanced features.

Reality:

Using avenues such as Refit Global, it is possible to get the most recent smartphones at a fraction of the cost of a new phone.

Myth 3: It is not a good idea to purchase a second hand mobile

It is a fact that buying goods that are not reliable may be dangerous. Purchases at proven sellers will however eliminate most of the risky details as far as second hand mobiles are concerned. Organizations such as Refit Global aim to carry out stringent quality control tests, software restoring, and authenticity tests on every phone before selling it.

Reality:

A second hand mobile phone is totally safe and reliable when bought by a reputable platform.

Myth 4: Second hand mobile phones are not warranted

Most individuals do not purchase old mobile phones since they do not expect them to have warranties. This is no longer true nowadays Reputed players such as Refit Global offer warranties on its refurbished and second hand mobiles and hence a safer and reliable purchase.

Reality:

Most of the certified secondhand mobiles offer warrantees, giving you an added comfort.

Myth 5: A Second Hand Mobile Cannot Give Good Performance

Another myth is that a second hand mobile phone will not serve well as compared to a new one. In practice, performance is dictated by hardware of the device as well as its level of maintenance. Even a used mobile can behave in a smooth way, with multitasking, camera and play features, assuming adequate testing and renewal procedures.

Reality:

Certified second hand mobile phones can play as well as new devices.

Myth 6: Second hand mobiles cannot be used with personal data on it.

One of the complaints is that purchasing a second hand mobile phone can jeopardize your own personal information. When purchased through reputable sources, however, all previous data is totally erased, and the phone returns to factory-original state. All devices supplied by Refit Global are safe and prepared to be used by a new owner.

Reality:

The likelihood of a used phone purchased in a certified vendor is not dangerous at all.
